This six-month program will help principal investigators develop a submission-ready proposal for the National Institutes of Health in 2015.

- Principal investigators applying to the program must have attended the February 4, 2014, or September 16, 2014, “Write Winning NIH Grant Proposals” seminar.

- Program applications are due in late September. Each applicant will then submit a pre-proposal to Grant Writers’ Seminars and Workshops, LLC (GWSW) in early November 2014. Participants accepted into the program will develop a submission-ready proposal for the NIH by June 2015. Please see program schedule for detailed information.

- Participants will work with a highly experienced GWSW consultant on targeting NIH mechanisms, strategizing, and editing.

- A required on-campus workshop and individual consultations will take place January 28-30, 2015.

- Program applications should be endorsed by the applicant’s department head and college research dean. The department and college/school combined cost is $1,500 per accepted applicant. The Division of Research will pay the remaining $2,100 of each selected participant’s fee.
